Nature whispers

Tickling, teasing

Look for it in e

Find it on the s

Then at times

Roaring, ragin

Wind whips by in forceful bursts, the leaves pain from their trees,

Forcing many from their homes, like birds, the squirrels, the bees.

Change returns and hot rays scorch. The earth cries out for rain.

Clouds grow full, converge, and drop their water for the pain.

Raindrops trickle to the streams with constant moving ease,

Making paths to rivers deep then rushing to the seas.

Name : _____

All of earth makes up a home for creatures large and small,
Butterflies, the birds, the deer, there's room enough for all.
Deep inside the dusty ground the earthworms eat and play.
Giant trees house sparrows' nests, and bears can lounge all day.

Nature is a constant ride, a living, breathing thing.

Rocks and lakes are part of the world's living thing.

Words may change, but the world is always there,

Constant melody
