

Seashells at the Shore

by Katie Clark

Brenton ran excitedly toward the water. Waves crashed loudly in the distance, and birds soared majestically overhead. It was his family's monthly trip to the beach.

Brenton loved splashing in the waves, diving underwater, and digging for shells in the sand. Today he was looking for seashells. Then he walked along the shore.

Grandma used to live at the nursing home with her. That's what she did.

In the water, Brenton saw a girl nearby. She did the same thing.

"Are you looking for shells?"

"Yes," she said.

"Yep," he answered.

They searched for shells.

"Do you come to the beach often?" Brenton asked.

"We come daily," replied the girl.

Brenton started to reply, but his fingers touched something hard. He quickly pulled up the object. It was a sand dollar! Grandma would love to have one of these.

Soon he had filled his small chest with seashells for Grandma. He couldn't wait to present her with this special treasure.
