Ocean Breeze

by Katie Clark

Read the poem and underline the sounds that contribute to alliterations in it.

Hard pavement sidewalks melt slowly to sand.

Bright sun and surf surround coastlines so grand.

Blue up above and bright blue down below.

Oceans so vibrant, their waters aglow.

Whispering winds stir up sands in a whirl.

Tiny glass pellets, a beautiful swirl.

Soft ocean breezes send scents on the air,

Conjuring daydreams and laughter to share.

Never too hot when a breeze cools the skin.

Sunrays beat down, but there's water. Jump in!

Slip off your shoes and get ready to soak.

Bask in the sunshine, your whimsies evoke.

High up above you'll see seagulls in flight,

Dipping and diving and bobbing from sight,

Sailing on breezes that coast through the sky,

Looking for supper, an endless supply.

Climb from the water, fly kites on the shore.

Breezes will keep them afloat even more.

Soon it is time to bid seashores goodbye.

Visit again when the breeze starts to fly.
