Adjective Clauses - Breaking Apart

An adjective clause, also called a relative clause, is a dependent clause that functions as an adjective in a sentence. These are introduced by relative pronouns such as who, which, that, where, when, whose, etc.

Example: I was residing in Seattle when Joseph was three years old.

I was residing in Seattle. Joseph was three years old then.

Break each sentence into two independent clauses, eliminating the relative clause.

1) Michael is a doctor who has specialized in diseases affecting children.

2) The police arrived at Blessy's home, when she dialed 911.

3) We have bought an antique ring, which is both expensive and exquisite.

4) Grayson frequently eats at the restaurant that is right next to his house.

5) We live in a house that has five bedrooms.

6) President Washington is a national hero who inspires thousands of Americans.

7) Amanda grew up in London where there are some amazing parks.

8) America has had some great explorers whose lives are nothing short of heroic.
An adjective clause, also called a relative clause, is a dependent clause that functions as an adjective in a sentence. These are introduced by relative pronouns such as who, which, that, where, when, whose, etc.

Example: I was residing in Seattle when Joseph was three years old.

I was residing in Seattle. Joseph was three years old then.

Break each sentence into two independent clauses, eliminating the relative clause.

1) Michael is a doctor who has specialized in diseases affecting children.

Michael is a doctor. He has specialized in diseases affecting children.

2) The police arrived at Blessy's home, when she dialed 911.

The police arrived at Blessy's home. She dialed 911.

3) We have bought an antique ring, which is both expensive and exquisite.

We have bought an antique ring. It is both expensive and exquisite.

4) Grayson frequently eats at the restaurant that is right next to his house.

Grayson frequently eats at the restaurant. It is right next to his house.

5) We live in a house that has five bedrooms.

We live in a house. It has five bedrooms.

6) President Washington is a national hero who inspires thousands of Americans.

President Washington is a national hero. He inspires thousands of Americans.

7) Amanda grew up in London where there are some amazing parks.

Amanda grew up in London. There are some amazing parks there.

8) America has had some great explorers whose lives are nothing short of heroic.

America has had some great explorers. Their lives are nothing short of heroic.